

assets, temporarily reduce pension contributions and accelerate tax collection in order to stay within the letter of budget law.

Despite a requirement that the governor submit a balanced budget to the legislature, California has had at least four deficits since 1983, and its fiscal predicament "clearly shows that a balanced budget provision is no panacea—in fact, at present it seems almost an irrelevancy," Gold told the Budget Committee. Since then, California's financial plight has worsened.

States with large, persistent operating deficits, including Louisiana, New York, and Connecticut, have issued bonds to finance the shortfall, a device that is permitted under some state balanced budget requirements.

Most of the 35 constitutional and 13 statutory balanced budget requirements on the books of the states apply only to state general funds—the operating budgets that pay for basic, day-to-day governmental services out of revenues from taxes, fees and sometimes lottery proceeds.

Outside of this, however, states borrow heavily to finance longer-term needs for buildings, roads, education and other infrastructure. They also maintain numerous "off budget" public authorities (for ports, highways, pensions and mineral extraction, for example) that issue bonds and incur debts.

Some experts say that longstanding political tradition, and fear of a downgraded credit rating, exert at least as much pressure on governors to run tight fiscal ships as the balanced budget requirements.

Because of these pressures, governors often take harsh austerity measures that would face far more resistance in Washington. During the 1991 recession, 23 states did not give workers salary increases; 17 states cut welfare benefits and many cut funding for higher education. According to Gold, a widespread response to state fiscal stress has been to increase tuition at state colleges, enabling state governments to reduce contributions to higher education.

Some say this kind of austerity, if extended to the federal budget because of the sanctions of a balanced budget amendment, would increase the severity and pain of economic downturns in a way that has not been true since the Depression.

State balanced budget requirements "generally have worked for state and local government," said Philip M. Dearborn, director of government finance research at the U.S. Advisory Commission on Intergovernmental Relations. "But there is a substantial difference between the management of states and of the federal government."

COMMENDING DR. ROBERT D. REISCHAUER

Mr. DOMENICI. Mr. President, today brings to an end the very distinguished term of the third Director of the Congressional Budget Office—Dr. Robert D. Reischauer. He has served in that office with the highest degree of professionalism. Under some very difficult conditions in his 6 years as Director he has been able to maintain the independence and high respect all of us have for the CBO. He has always given his best, and called them as he saw them—sometimes to the chagrin of both sides of the aisle.

In the 21 years of the CBO there have been only three Directors. The first,

Dr. Alice Rivlin, followed by Dr. Rudy Penner and then Dr. Robert Reischauer. Dr. Reischauer will now be followed in the high tradition of those Directors by Dr. June O'Neill. Quite frankly, one of the difficulties in finding someone to replace Bob's expired term was the very high standards of professionalism and objectivity Bob and his predecessors have brought to that office.

This is as it should be. The CBO directorship is a critical position and one that must provide objective, nonbiased, and professional analysis to the Congress—not an easy task in this day of instant communications and many well funded, organized lobbyists' "think tanks." Just being able to sort out the wheat from the chaff has become a full time responsibility of the CBO. Over the years we have also given CBO more responsibilities as in the recent case of the unfunded mandates legislation. Of course, we have not necessarily always given them more resources to go along with the additional workload.

Last evening the U.S. Senate adopted by unanimous consent, Senate Resolution 81, commending Dr. Reischauer for his long and faithful service to the Congress and the American public. The resolution was cosponsored by myself and the ranking member of the Budget Committee, the distinguished majority and minority leaders of the Senate, all the members of the Senate Budget Committee, and many others. I am sure, had time and resources permitted we would have had 100 original cosponsors.

The resolution we adopted unanimously last evening can only be considered a very small token of the Senate's appreciation of Dr. Reischauer's service to the Congress. In this arena today, where making decisions about complicated, complex, and difficult public policy issues that can affect the future course of this country, Dr. Reischauer has been a clear and concise voice. We may not have always agreed with Dr. Reischauer's analysis, but we always respected his analysis. He always gave his best. He always was fair and honest in his analysis. Somehow, I think wherever Bob Reischauer's career now takes him, that mantle of honesty and integrity will always go with him.

I now wish him and his family the best and I congratulate him for his public service and a job well done.

HARRY V. MCKENNA FUNERAL— THE PASSING OF A PIONEER

Mr. PELL. Mr. President, I rise to share with my colleagues the news that Harry V. McKenna died last week and I recently returned from his funeral in Rhode Island.

Harry McKenna was not only the dean of broadcast journalism in our State for many decades, he was a premier broadcast journalist whose high standards remain a challenge for his successors.

Harry became the touchstone for Rhode Island politicians until his retirement in 1983. It seems you would not be taken seriously as a candidate, unless you were interviewed by Harry McKenna.

When I first ran for the Senate, almost 36 years ago, my first public interview was with Harry. His weekly "Radio Press Conference" ran for 32 years and was Rhode Island's longest-running news broadcast.

I was saddened when I learned of his death and I was touched by the gathering that honored him at his funeral. He was a good friend and an exemplary journalist.

After he retired, I missed him. Now I miss him even more.

My wife's and my deepest sympathy go to his wonderful wife, Julie, and his children and grandchildren.

I ask unanimous consent that the text of an obituary that appeared in the Feb. 22, 1995 issue of Providence (RI) Journal be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the obituary was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

HARRY V. MCKENNA; DIRECTED NEWS
PROGRAM ON LOCAL RADIO

(By S. Robert Chiappinelli)

CRANSTON—Harry V. McKenna, the former WEAN news director who became an institution himself while interviewing Rhode Island's movers and shakers, died yesterday at the Roger Williams Medical Center.

Mr. McKenna, of 107 Grace St., was the husband of Julie (Lister) McKenna.

A large man with a resonant voice, blustery style, and in later years, a shock of white hair, Mr. McKenna was called the dean of Rhode Island news correspondents.

His weekly Radio Press Conference ran for 32 years and was Rhode Island's longest-running news broadcast.

"He had kind of a special place," former Gov. J. Joseph Garrahy recalled yesterday. "He always sat at the right-hand corner of my desk at a press conference."

After each press conference, Mr. McKenna would collar the willing governor for a special telephone interview for WEAN.

"We had a wonderful relationship," Garrahy said.

Mr. McKenna, a member of the Rhode Island Heritage Hall of Fame, won respect both among politicians and fellow members of the press.

"For more than three decades, Rhode Island radio audiences tracked the course of state government and politics through the WEAN news reports of Harry McKenna," James V. Wyman, Journal-Bulletin vice president and executive editor, said.

"His familiar deep voice resonated with authority and credibility as he applied his aggressive style to interviews with key governmental officials," Wyman said.

"Harry's approach to newsgathering was both straightforward and relentless. But he was known and respected for his fairness."

Mr. McKenna joined the Journal-Bulletin in 1944 as nightside police and fire reporter. In 1949, he was named WEAN news director and was the station's news and public affairs director when he retired. More than 1,400 persons attended his retirement party in February, 1983.

John P. Hackett, former Journal-Bulletin chief editorial writer and longtime political writer who often teamed with Mr. McKenna on Radio Press Conference, said he was a
